SOURCE EVALUATIONS ARE DEFINITIVE. APPRAISAL OF CONTENT IS TENTATIVE.

- SOURCE:
- - The purpose of the study is twofold: first, to provide a comprehensive survey of open Soviet literature relating to gyroscopic theory, applications, and equipment; and second, to provide an indication of Soviet accomplishments and capabilities in this field.
  - Attachment B, the original German text of this study; Attachment C, source's review, in German, of additional Soviet literature in the field of gyroscopics; and Attachment D, a sanitized translation of this review, have been deposited in the CIA Library, from which copies may be obtained. Attachment D may be considered UNCLASSIFIED when detached from the rest of the report.
  - The section of Attachment A entitled "Personal Experiences" adds some new information to, and in some cases, clarifies and expands that already obtained in interrogations of [redacted]. The new information in this section is concerned primarily with Soviet personalities contacted by [redacted] and evaluations of Soviet capabilities in gyroscopic research and development.
  - With regard to the statements made by [redacted] concerning the general state of the art of gyroscopics in the USSR, it should be noted that some of the more recent publications abstracted in Attachment C had not been reviewed at the time of the completion of the original study. Such statements should therefore be considered predicated upon only those publications which appear in the bibliography and his personal experiences.
